This six-story Tribeca hotel opened after much anticipation in January 2008. Wedged between SoHo and the Financial District, the 45-room property is perfectly situated for business travelers or for savvy tourists who enjoy hopping between the area's trendy eateries, art galleries, and bars. The winding hallways evoke a feeling of being in a New York apartment building and the rooms have a Manhattan loft space vibe accented by rich hardwood floors and wood-paneled fold-up desks which make for a nifty work space. There are plenty of in-room diversions too: climate controlled air conditioning, Wi-Fi, flat-screen TVs, iPod docking stations, and CD players. Rooms are also equipped with a 17-inch laptop safe, two line cordless telephones, and Egyptian cotton linens. And, just for good measure, fresh-cut flowers adorn each room. If that's not sweet enough, the nightly turn down service leaves guests with goodies from Jacques Torres Chocolates. The chic in-house eatery, 'beca, serves up American and Mediterranean fare by chef Kristiaan Ueno.
